Something to think about...

From A Visitor At Church Services:

I am a visitor, and sometimes I see things your church members do not notice. I can appreciate things you take for granted—and be repulsed by things you have learned to accept. Your building may be beautiful, your sermon inspiring, and your church perfectly aligned with the Bible—but most of the time it is not these things, but the little things that I notice.

When I walk in the door, I feel like a stranger—for that is what I am. So it means a lot when someone welcomes me with a friendly greeting. I do not mean the preacher or an elder, but one of the regular members. It is nice when they want to know my name, and even better when they want to know me. They try to help me feel at ease. I make two new friends.

I like Bible classes when there is love, excitement and participation, where the people seem glad to be there. I like it when they introduce me as a visitor, when someone asks me to sit next to them, and when a person I have never met helps me find 1st Corinthians 13 in my Bible. The class members are anxious to discuss the lesson and see how it applies to everyday life, and they talk about God in language I can understand. I'm not used to that in my old church. I leave class with some new understandings and some things I need to talk about.

Someone from the class invited me to sit with them in the worship service. When the singing starts, I notice there is no organ, but it sounds beautiful anyway. My friend next to me is not a fantastic singer, but he sings enthusiastically...like he means what the song is saying. Everyone is participating, and the people seem to be enjoying worship. I am not used to that, but it makes me feel good, too.

When the preacher starts talking, it impresses me that the people start reaching for Bibles and note pads. They follow in the Bible and seem to be really interested in what is being said, so I listen too.

After worship, I usually figure it is time to head home to my paper and television, but all the people around me make an effort to meet and welcome me. They invite me to a come back to visit again...they invite me home for a Sunday dinner. They want to get to know me better. All of them seem to know and love each other, and I have a hard time getting through the crowd, so I stay and talk and meet more people. The television and paper can wait.

When I get back home again, I often forget what the building looked like or even what the sermon was. But I remember where I met people who love God and each other. I want to come back soon so I can find out what makes them that way.
