THE TONGUE

The tongue is such a little thing
About four inches long.
Compared to other muscles
It is thought to be most strong.

The tongue without the reins of thought
Can cause a lot of harm.
It can destroy a friendship
Or make cold a loved one's arm.

The truth when fitly spoken
Will edify us all,
But false words idly tossed about
Can cause the weak to fall.

The words I speak in anger
I never can recall,
For though I try to make it right
The heart remembers all.

People see the things I do
And hear the words I say.
God will ask me to explain
When I face the judgement day.

My tongue rests inside my mouth
Within a natural sheath.
In order to control my tongue
I can simply clench my teeth.

So I will pray for wisdom
To keep my tongue in check
That the words that come out of my mouth
Won't be a noose around my neck.
