If Only We Could See!

Robert Burns longed for humans the power to see ourselves as others see us. In his "To a Louse, on Seeing One on a Lady's Bonnet at Church," the Scottish poet muses on the difference it might make if we humans saw ourselves as the tiny bug saw the upper-class lady at church. Stripped of finery, titles, and airs, what insights might come if we saw ourselves as others see us!

If we could see ourselves as God sees us, we would know that most of our fears never materialize. The majority of things most of us spend the bulk of our time worrying about will never happen. So we waste energy and weaken ourselves for today's task. Foresight and precaution is one thing, but worry is something else again. "Don't fret about tomorrow," Jesus said, "for each day will bring enough troubles of its own."

If we could see as God sees, we would realize that no problem that does arise is without a resolution. In our gloomier moments of illness, financial stress, or personal problems, we wring our hands over questions that seem to be without answers. But the Bible still promises: "God is faithful, and he will not let your trial be more than you can bear. When you are tempted, he will show you a way out so that you will be able to stand up under your stress."

If we could see ourselves as God does, we would understand that no problem comes without a potential blessing attached. The good end of a painful beginning can seldom be known in advance. So, in our anxiety, we tend to doubt that anything good could come from heartache. "Consider it pure joy, my brothers, whenever you face trials of many kinds," said the half-brother of Jesus, "because you know that the testing of your faith develops perseverance."

If we could see as God sees, we would know that pain always signals the possibility for growth. Although we sometimes sigh for a world free of difficulties, we know deep inside that such a world would create cold and unfeeling people. "No discipline seems pleasant at the time, but painful. Later on, however, it produces a harvest of righteousness and peace for those who learn from it."

Through God's eyes, today may appear very different from what you think you are seeing right now. Heaven's perspective on human life is better, and God's vision is clearer (FoL).

In Christ,
Terry
